Day 2 Antananarivo-Antsirabe

As we stop for lunch in Behenjy or Ambatolampy, the outskirts of Tana are already behind us and we are driving along the famous N7. Antsirabe, which we reach after about 170km on a well-maintained road, was originally founded in the 19th century by a Norwegian missionary. The architecture of some buildings in the older part of the city still reflects this history. In a beautiful and peaceful hotel, you can unwind and process the first experiences of your journey. With a bit of luck, you may even spot some chameleons in the garden. Overnight at the "Chambres du Voyageur" hotel.

The privately-run "Ialatsara Camp" is a sanctuary for numerous rare lemur species, which can be discovered and observed on a short nature walk. In Fianarantsoa, we visit the photo studio of world-renowned photographer Pierrot Men, whose works are internationally recognized but can only be seen in his studio in Fianarantsoa on the island. After this visit, we continue on a well-paved section of the N7. The landscape dramatically changes on the way to Ambalavao, with huge granite rocks and barren laterite landscapes flanking the road.
